...Bangladesh to release some of the accused in Father's murder Panthimoy Patri, a member of the Md. Salim Khan family, was hacked to death on May 23, 2014, in Dhaka, Bangladesh. (Photo courtesy of Md. Salim Khan) DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Police in Bangladesh said Wednesday they have dropped charges against at least five people who were detained in the killing of a popular Roman Catholic priest whose killing was alleged to be linked to a rival religious sect. Police sources said another 21 people accused of involvement in the murder of Father Emmanuel Shariful Islam, who was hacked to death on May 23, 2014, were to be released after Tuesday's announcement. The decision was made at a meeting of the National Investigation Agency, the country's top crime-fighting agency, in Dhaka. "Three of the nine people who were freed on bail in this connection on Tuesday have now been released," Dhaka Metropolitan Police commissioner Hasan Manik told reporters. The other six were released last week. A court in Dhaka ordered the release of the people, including two of the accused who died in custody, on Tuesday. Police had said they were waiting for the National Investigation Agency's assessment of the case before proceeding. The families of the deceased complain of delays in justice, the church said. "The court ordered to release the accused but the police did not allow

Demonstrators also launched fireworks at riot officers, who responded by firing CS gas at them, a National Health Service (NHS) worker told the Press Association. A spokesman for the UNISON branch of the NHS, which represents workers in Hull, said no one from the union was injured. Demonstrators occupied a row of buildings in West Hull, where an occupation of the building in Sproatt Crescent turned into a violent
