More particularly, the present invention relates to the catalytic hydrogenation of nitrobenzene to obtain nitroparaffins in the presence of a specific ZSM-type catalyst supported on activated carbon. Nitroparaffins are useful as intermediates in the production of a wide range of important chemicals and pharmaceuticals. For example, the hydrogenation of nitroparaffins is used for the production of aromatic nitro compounds, nitro-aromatics and aromatic amines. In this hydrogenation process, nitroparaffins are reduced to corresponding aromatic amines or nitro-aromatics.
