I know that it sounds like a silly question, but I have no clue what this limit would be called. I have encountered this kind of limit in the following context:  $\lim_{x \rightarrow 0} \frac{1}{x} \int \frac{x^4}{x^4+x^2+1} dx$  What I have also noticed is that the limit will be equal to infinity, but I can't actually find a name for this kind of behaviour. I know it has to do with some sort of uniform convergence, but I don't know what it would be called. A: That would be called an improper integral since it does not have a
